

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

Based on all explanations in the previous chapter, it can be concluded that the frequency of utterances of the speech had 75% code mixed, 25% used full first language which means Bahasa Indonesia, and 0% used full foreign language or English. Besides, there were 81 utterances that used the type of insertion, 16 utterances used the type of alternation, and 0 utterances used the type of congruent lexicalization. Furthermore, there were 13 utterances used both of insertion and alternation. Meanwhile, the functions of code-mixing applied by the lecturer itself were to feel free and comfortable when explaining the materials, to do the repetition for clarifying her speech, and to make the teaching-learning process easier when talking about a particular subject.

B. Suggestion

All suggestions are to be shared with English lecturers and English students to make improvements on the consistency of speaking English as the position of English lecturers and students of English study program or to have a consideration to use code-mixing so that students can understand what the lecturer's talking about. The English lecturers and English students are expected to minimize the code-mixed language. They are expected to do more speaking in full foreign language or English.